

I Love My Public Library

I love my public library. The public library is a good place to learn new skills. It is a nice place to visit together with the whole family. It is also an excellent place to learn computer skills. It also has the Learner to Learner Program to learn English skills. It is a wonderful place to gain general information about the world.

The public library is a good place to learn new skills. As of now, I have been enrolled in the Escondido Learner to Learner Program for three years. In this program I learned how to speak, write, read and listen to English. Furthermore I learned basic computer skills such as how to make power points and write paragraphs on the computer.

It is a nice place to visit together with the whole family. My wife and I enroll our sons each year in the summer programs promoted by Escondido and San Marcos Libraries because it is an important opportunity to live together those valuable moments, as for our sons to learn new strategies on how to read fast and improve comprehension. Summer programs give parents the opportunity to talk with their daughters and sons about the themes presented by the program and their experiences lived through.

It also has the Learner to learner Program to learn computer skills. My experience in learning computer skills was enjoyable when Ms. Melissa Dickman, my tutor in summer 2008, taught me how to make a personal budget. As well in summer 2009, my computer tutor in Escondido Library taught me different basic techniques of how to work making power points of various themes.

The public library is a good place to learn English skills in the Learner to Learner Program. I'm enrolled in this program because it can help you by giving you a personal tutor in English, computer, speech, etc. Ms. Pauline McClay, who is an enthusiastic and motivating person is helping me in speaking, reading, listening, and writing English. We have a meeting at the Escondido Library to continue our English lessons and she does correct my grammar. Sometimes I feel that I am learning English very slowly, but it is not true because people around you are noticing how you advance. The English Language is hard to learn, but it isn't impossible to learn.

It is a wonderful place to gain general knowledge of the world. I like to visit the public libraries in Escondido, San Marcos, Vista, and Oceanside because I can read many books about others countries. Also I can read newspapers from across the United States there by giving me a broad knowledge of the news. I can use the internet to see my e-mail. I can rent movies, books, and educational movies. To me it is a pleasure to invite all people to visit any public library near your house because you will learn new things and will discover new opportunities to enrich your lives. For all the reasons mentioned above I am very grateful to my Public Library.
